HARRISVILLE, FEBRUARY 26, 1876.

This certifies that I have examined the above Town Treasurer's Account, and find it to be correctly cast and properly vouched.

DAVID WILLARD,

Auditor.

Report of the Superintending School Committee

OF HARRISVILLE, MARCH, 1876.

In compliance with the Laws of the State, the Superintending School Committee respectfully presents to the town the following report of the schools for the year ending March, 1876.

DISTRICT NO. 1—At the commencement of the Summer Term of the schools in this district, an attempt was made to have both the Grammer and Primary departments in the school house, the Primary scholars using the ante room for their exercises, the whole to be under the charge of a teacher and an assistant teacher. The arrangement did not prove satisfactory however, and the Grammer school returned to its old place of instruction, the vestry.

PRIMARY SCHOOL.—This school now came under the sole direction of the assistant teacher who, though young and experienced and shrinking from the responsibility, yet set herself to work with a success which both surprised and gratified us. Order soon reigned and was maintained to a good degree during both terms of the school. Good progress in most respects was made. Lack of experience of course, operated unfavorably to a certain degree. There was not that use made of the blackboard nor that attention given to the various and peculiar sounds of the letters and combination of letters which compose the words in the reading lessons for small scholars, which we hoped to see. Justice requires us to say however, that the teacher was no more defective in this respect than most experienced teachers. Still it is a defect which, as we have now reading books that dwell particularly upon this point, we hope soon to see removed. Good teachers whether young or old will aim to be constantly improving in their methods of teaching.

The percentage of attendance increased from 82 the first term to 85 the second. The number neither absent nor tardy the first term was 13, the second term, 8. Daily singing added much to the interest and value of the school.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—Summer term. The attendance during this term was 2 per cent. higher than that reached by any other school the present year and six per cent. higher than that reached by any, last year, more than half the scholars not being once absent. The progress made in most of the studies was fair. The greatest defect noticed was in the reading,—a lack of readiness

In calling the words and of distinctness in utterance. We were gratified to find singing practiced in the school also.

WINTER TERM.—The attendance during this term fell almost as far below the average as that of the first term, orse above it. The teacher abounded in knowledge, was successful in maintaining order, and endeavored to do his best for the school. Yet through lack of voice and ability to win a portion of his scholars there was, towards the close of the school, a falling off in numbers, and a lack of progress in some respects which disappointed us. But the knowledge gained of the elementary sounds of the English language, surpassed anything of the kind we have ever before seen in a common school. The first and second classes in Monroe's Readers did what very few teachers can do; they spelled phonetically words containing every sound in our language. The different sounds of g in get and gem, and the sound of each letter in these words was given with accuracy and promptness. So it was with words embracing all the vowel and consonant sounds and their combinations. Hence notwithstanding the defectiveness in some other respects we regard this term of school as one of very great profit.

DISTRICT NO. 2 This school was in charge of the same teacher during the three terms of the year.

The Summer term which closed July 9th, was one of interest and success. The attendance was excellent, being 90 per cent. Twelve were not absent during the term, and only 15 tardy marks appear upon the Register. The progress in all branches was fair and in some very good. We marked the recitations in arithmetic and geography, excellent. Some very good maps were drawn. The order seemed to be very good.

The Fall term presented a cleaner Register than the Summer, as the attendance was 91 per cent.; 8 were not absent; and none tardy. The progress was good. In some classes the recitations were very good. The classes in spelling did finely; so did the 1st class in geography. Some attention was given to the sounds of the letters.

In the Winter term, though there was the same number of names enrolled, there was a falling off in the attendance of 7 per cent.; and there was a still greater diminution in the interest and value of the school. Still in the written examination at the close, several of the exercises were very creditable to their authors. This was especially true of some specimens of spelling. Two spelled correctly nineteen of the twenty words selected by the committee.

DISTRICT No. 3.—Summer Term. We found this school in charge of an instructor who, much to gratification, used the black-board in teaching almost all the branches of study pursued. Good progress was made; The 1st class in geography manifested remarkable thoroughness in the portion studied by them. We found the school able not only to name the vowels but to give the different sounds of each. An effort was made with considerable success to lead the scholars to read in natural tones, instead of the stiff, artificial ones which are so prevalent. Some excellent dialogues and pieces were well spoken. The attendance was 85 per cent. Three scholars were neither absent nor tardy. Good order prevailed.

Winter Term. The teacher of this term of school was remarkable for the clearness of her explanations and for thoroughness in the studies pursued. A determination to do well whatever was undertaken, was successful. Hence at the examination we find our notes on the recitations in geography, grammar, history and two classes in arithmetic, each accompanied by the word "excellent." There was good order, and a respectful courtesy on the part of all. The percentage of attendance however was low and we were disappointed that so little attention was given to writing and the sounds of the letters. Still three members of the school were not absent either term; and justice requires us to say that in our opinion no school has made greater advancement during the year. Both teachers were competent, experienced, earnest and laborious.

DISTRICT No. 4.—Summer term. The teacher of this school was young and inexperienced, but as her scholars were also young, she was quite successful. Indeed we think it would be difficult for a teacher not to be successful in a district where the inhabitants manifest such a deep and general interest in the school. At one of the examinations there were three times as many visitors as scholars. Fair progress was made in all the studies. We were particularly pleased with the clearness of the explanations made by the scholars at the blackboard. We were gratified too, with the distinctness of utterance and accuracy of inflection which characterized the reading. In regularity of attendance this school made great improvement. There were but one-third as many tardy marks as during the corresponding term last year; two were not absent; and the general attendance was 10 per cent greater.

Winter term. There was the same teacher, and the same praiseworthy distinctness and accuracy in reading pieces in prose as last term. The poetry was too measured; the spelling was superior; we think it has not been excelled in any district in town. We were sorry to see a falling off in the attendance, though it was the same as in the corresponding term last year. The tardy marks, however, were not half as many, and there were no cases of dismissal. One pupil was not absent during either of the terms.

DISTRICT No. 5. Summer term. The attendance during this term of school was 95 per cent.; the largest of any except that of the Grammar School in No. 1. Of its thirteen scholars, 9 were neither absent or tardy; there was but one tardy mark; and none were dismissed. There was good order, and pains were taken that the scholars should understand their lessons. Good progress was made. Some good maps were drawn upon the blackboard by the first class in geography, indicating the territory which they had gone over during the term.

Winter term. This term was distinguished for the good order and respectful bearing of the scholars. The progress made in most of the studies was good. The recitations in arithmetic were especially interesting, showing that the teacher had been successful in making the knowledge gained practical. The class in Monroe's 2d Reader gratified us by the fluency and accuracy of pronunciation and inflection with which they read. The attendance this term was 92 per cent, being higher than that reached by any other winter school. This school, as to attendance, is the banner school, as it was last year, the average for the entire year being 5 per cent. higher than that of any other school.

Near the close of the last of the winter schools the committee received from the Superintendent of Public Instruction, a request for specimens of scholars' work for the Centennial Exhibition. We prepared several lists of ten questions each, upon studies pursued in our schools, and sent them to the teachers in No. 1 and 2, together with the prescribed directions carefully indicated and underscored; directions which we had previously read and explained to them.

Of the specimens furnished in District No. 1, one by Henry F. Stratton and one by Gracie S. Russell were forwarded to Mr. Simonds. The others through some defect, or a failure in some respect to comply with directions, were not suitable to be sent. In District No. 2, though some good specimens were prepared, and it would seem as though some, especially those in spelling must have been finished within the prescribed two and one-half hours, yet as the teacher kept no record of the time, much to our disappointment, none could be sent.

We received also from the same source and for the same exhibition, a request for a history of the schools and of education in the town. But as we lacked the knowledge and time needful to prepare such a paper, we requested one who by long residence in town and large acquaintance with its history was fitted for the service, Aaron Smith, Esq., to take this labor upon himself. He kindly consented, and so far as we can judge, has done the work well.

During the year embraced in this report, our old readers have been displaced by a series prepared by Lewis B. Monroe, Professor of Vocal Culture in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This series we believe to be superior to any other now in use, particularly for instruction in the elementary sounds of the language. These books have been introduced at one-half the retail price where old books were given in exchange, and at two-thirds the retail price when bought without exchange. Through the recommendation of the committee, four of the five Districts have purchased at the reduced price a series of these Readers for the use of their teachers. Another series has been reserved in the hands of the committee in the expectation that the remaining district will also purchase. Had we space we should be glad to state the reasons for this course.

Four scholars from this town have attended school in District No. 6 Dublin; and one scholar from Dublin, four from Hancock and four from Nelson have attended our schools. The number of different scholars in town who have attended the public schools the present year is 176. The number of children between 5 and 15 years of age reported as not attending school is 7. The following were not absent during either term of the year: Milton A. Silver, Fred A. Holbrook, Anna H. Holbrook, Alla F. Bromley, Addie V. Barker, Annie Cashian; and the following were neither tardy nor absent: Frank C. Farwell, Bertie Russell, Mertie G. Hayward, Lilla Miller, Carrie A. Silver, Alice M. Hutchinson, Lizzie M. Howe, N. Winnifred Barker. Of these, Bertie Russell, Alice M. Hutchinson and Carrie A. Silver were not absent last year.

Reading and spelling were attended to by all in the schools. There was one scholar in French and one in Physiology in district No. 3; and two in drawing in district No. 5. Further statistics we report by table. From these, and from what has been said, it will be seen that the aggregate number of weeks of school is nine and one-third less than last year, and that the number of scholars is 23 less. But this argues no abatement of interest in common school education; not any lack of interest on the part of scholars, for the number of children between 5 and 15 years of age not attending school is 17 less than last year: while the number of scholars not absent one-half day, reckoned term by term, is 24 greater; and the number of those not absent either term of the year is 9 greater. The tardy marks have diminished 209.

In view of the fact that the increase in the average attendance upon the schools has been 2 per cent., while the cases of tardiness have diminished nearly one-half; in view of the fact also that we have secured a new, a valuable, and for the first time a uniform series of Reading Books, resulting in some schools in a large increase in the knowledge of the elementary sounds of our language, and promising a like increase in others, we think the progress of the schools the present year will compose favorably with that of last year.

We would urge, however, as in our last report, the importance of securing competent and faithful teachers. School money, next to that appropriated to religious purposes, is sacred, and should be paid to those only who have the capacity and the disposition to earn it. A competent, whole-hearted working teacher is cheap at almost any price. To pay money to any other is next to throwing it away.

Respectfully submitted.
